Bad economy slows Watercolours

JENN WATT

Editor

A combination of a sagging economy and site plan paperwork is slowing down the Watercolours Condominium development, the CEO of the development corporation said.

While the real estate market is rebounding in Toronto, in Haliburton the industry is less robust and houses don't turn over as quickly, Chuck Mady said in an interview.

Meaning potential condo owners can't sell their homes to free up money to buy, which put a damper on sales of his development.

"Things in the GTA here are a lot different than they are up there, things move quickly here, they're just not up there. Until they do, we won't get it going until things are better," he said.

Mady Corporation had previously planned to relaunch the concept of Watercolours Condominium this spring and some in the community have been wondering what the status of the building is.

At a chamber of commerce breakfast last week, Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey was asked by an audience member what was happening with the development.

"I haven't heard too much about it, I know they feel they're not wanted in this county," he replied.

Despite winning an Ontario Municipal Board hearing in March of 2009 to go forward with the 150-unit lifestyle condos overlooking Head Lake, there are still a number of planning exercises that need to be done before Mady gets the go-ahead to build from Dysart et al.

"We have some issues – not insignificant issues – with the town that have to be done. While we got a favourable

FISHING

Area lakes get new residents

The hatchery at the Haliburton Highlands Outdoor Association and the Ministry of Natural Resources have been busy the last two weeks stocking local lakes.

So far 3,700 Haliburton silver, 8,000 Haliburton gold, 7,000 Killala lake trout plus 21,000 rainbow trout have been stocked in 22 local lakes.

The hatchery is maintained and the trout raised by volunteers dedicated to the fish, sport angling and the health of our lakes. The Hatchery has five adult rearing tanks, two early rearing tanks and three incubator tanks, two outdoor ponds as well as a small hatchery that is just dedicated to walleye incubation.

It takes 18 months of care and feeding to get the fish to the size ready for stocking. It starts with collecting and fertilizing local wild eggs, incubation, fry development and growing fingerlings to stocking size. Volunteers clean tanks every day and feed the fish three times a day for six to 18 months.

Stocking is our favourite time of year. Volunteers wade into the pond and net out the rainbow trout. We work in partnership with the MNR and stock lakes by truck or boat depending on the lake's accessibility. For remote lakes the MNR helicopter lands beside the hatchery and is loaded up with fish. The helicopter hovers above the lake and then the fish are released down a tube into the lake.

Haliburton lake trout are genetically unique to the Highlands and their genetics date back to the last glaciers. The HHOA and the MNR are dedicated to maintaining and improving the Haliburton lake trout in local lakes.

COMPETITION

Haliburton Dance Arts brings home gold

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

Haliburton was well represented at the 2010 Bedazzled Dance Champions, held in Niagara Falls, as Haliburton Dance Arts brought home 24 first-place finishes.

The competition is one of the largest in Canada, and this year hosted 16 dance schools comprised of approximately 1,500 to 2,000 students. The Haliburton club was the smallest in attendance.

The competitive club, which is comprised of 50 kids from ages four to 18, also managed to receive four second-place finishes, one third-place finish and the highest overall finish for the senior jazz group, senior lyrical group and solo performances by Shaylynn Hutchings and Ryanne Horsley. The award for the dancer with the most potential overall was given to Shaylynn Hutchings.

Dancers of all ages took to the stage to prepare for the Haliburton Dance Arts showcase, which took place at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion on May 7 and 8. The showcase featured a variety of dance styles including acrobatics, lyrical jazz and tap. /Photos by Angelica Blenich

The dance club, now in its 14th year of operation, was started by Terri Matthews who has been dancing since the age of three and teaching for more than 25 years. Matthews moved to Haliburton from Brampton, where she was the cultural and creative coordinator for the city of Brampton. Her dance style and teaching methods were quickly well received by members of the Haliburton community.

"The first year I started Haliburton Dance Arts I had 24 students," says Matthews. "By the second year I had 200."

Currently the club has 50 students on its competitive dance team and 125 overall. Matthews, along with additional instructors, teaches everything from jazz and ballet to tap, musical theatre and acrobatics. Along with her dance background Matthews is a trained gymnastics instructor.

"The acrobatics is definitely the most popular," says Matthews. "It's a mix between traditional acrobatics and gymnastics tumbling."

Matthews believes a significant amount of the dancer's recent competition success can be attributed to the dedication and passion the students demonstrate all year long.

"Those kids work so hard, they're like little professionals," says Matthews. "The dancers are so focused and disciplined."

Teaching dance in a small town, says Matthews, affords her the opportunity to create close relationships with her dancers.

"There's a sense of community in Haliburton," says Matthews. "The students feel like my family. I definitely develop close bonds with them and every year when my senior students leave I cry."

HOUSING

'For low-income families there's just nothing'

JENN WATT

Editor

Seniors and low-income families are the two most under-served demographics in Haliburton County when it comes to housing, the manager of Parklane and Echo Hills apartments says.

Those who are able to pay market rent for downtown apartments are facing lengthy wait times of up to 10 years, while spaces for working-class families are nearly non-existent.

"For low-income families there's just nothing," Barb Fawcett says. "And we're all concerned about seniors, which we should be, but eventually there will be nobody to serve the seniors. There'll be nobody able to live here."

Between Echo Hills and Parklane there are 95 units, 70 per cent of which are rent-geared-to-income and 30 per cent are the market rent units.

Fawcett's observations of the local situation are mirrored across the province, according to a new report released by the Ontario Non-Profit Housing Association, which identifies "low-income families, singles and seniors" as the losers in the affordable housing market.

"How many people are leaving their communities, their friends and their families because they cannot afford housing? How many local economies will suffer if workers cannot live and work in the same place?" Keith Ward, president of the ONPHA said in a press release.

In Haliburton, both the workers and the seniors often have to leave the community for housing.

In the recently released Aging Well report, Haliburton County seniors expressed concern over the lack of housing options available for their needs. Two of the Aging Well committee's members had to leave the group during the last year to find housing in a larger town.

Every year in the fall, Fawcett starts to get calls from seniors wanting to move out of their homes before winter hits.

"You get the phone calls that usually start in September of people saying, 'I just can't stay in my home any longer, I can't do another winter' and it's bad enough when they're on your wait list, but when they haven't even come on your wait list and they're telling you that," she trails off.

And while in large cities it is the subsidized apartments that are most coveted, Fawcett says in her buildings the market rent units are the most popular simply because no one else is providing housing.

"Probably right now we have between 150 and 160 waiting and willing to pay market rent and in the neighbourhood of 40 to 50 on the rent-geared-to-income [list]," she said.

There should be enough demand for housing to inspire business to step up and build it, but none has come forward.

"There's a ready-made rental market out there, but it costs so much to put buildings up, private industry in our situation, well, you can tell it's not happening. So, without government being involved these kinds of buildings would never get built," she said.

The province has provided some grant programs for affordable housing – recently awarding money to Fenelon Falls and Lindsay – but since downloading the responsibility to municipalities in the 2001, there has been little movement in this county toward building greater capacity.

"In small municipalities like ours there just isn't the money there to fund them," Fawcett said.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Reeve sees the benefits of streetscape plan, promotes downtown development

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

Haliburton Reeve Murray Fearrey shed some light on the recently announced streetscape project to all those in attendance at the Chamber of Commerce breakfast held at Blairhampton golf club on May 6.

The streetscape will encompass York Street and a proposed western gateway for Highland Street to improve the area surrounding the cenotaph. The plan is being made possible thanks to a $1.1 million grant from the federal government.

The project aims to support local economic development through the Community Adjustment Fund (CAF) announced in Canada's economic action plan.

During the breakfast Fearrey outlined details of the streetscape and stressed the benefits it will bring to the village of Haliburton.

"The objective of this plan is to promote a safe and healthy community," said Fearrey. "It will ease pedestrian traffic as well as promote development in the downtown core."

Other benefits, said Fearrey, include reducing emissions and promoting a healthier lifestyle. The streetscape will also help correct parking issues as well as improve the infrastructure of Haliburton.

According to Fearrey the municipality has been trying to move ahead on the streetscape project for the past three years. Now that the required funds have come in, the municipality will be going beyond its original plan.

"We will be working with the utilities to remove the hydro poles on Highland Street and put them underground," explained Fearrey. "This should help improve the aesthetics of the downtown area."

The ball is already rolling on the project as engineering plans are currently underway. The timeline for completing the streetscape, says Fearrey, has to coincide with both the tourism and hunting seasons.

"The project will begin at the end of August and will hopefully be finished by early November, before the hunting season begins and everyone goes away," joked Fearrey.

The project, says Fearrey, will not just be beneficial to the village of Haliburton but the entire county as a whole.

"If this helps Haliburton it helps the whole county," said Fearrey, "I truly believe that, because contrary to what you might hear, I'm not anti-Minden."

Questions surrounding the project included whether or not the job would be done locally.

"There will be consultants and local tenders involved," said Fearrey. "However since the money funding this project is federal you're obliged to follow their direction."

Other questions included whether the project would result in the removal of parking meters or the addition of traffic lights.

According to Fearrey the streetscape will not include any new traffic lights and as for the parking meters, it's not clear what's going to happen with those once the streetscape is developed.

Fearrey was also questioned on whether or not he plans to run in the upcoming election.

"I plan on making an announcement regarding my candidacy on the May long weekend," Fearrey told those in attendance.

friends, denying the emotional impact the accident had on March 25, 1975.

But when his mother died about eight years ago, Stewart realized he couldn't hold those feelings in any longer.

"After my mother passed away I fell apart," he says.

"I lied to everyone all of those years because I kept telling people I was OK and I guess I wasn't OK ... I finally got a chance to let it go, because I held it in for almost 30 years," he says.

Stewart's speaking from behind a booth at the high school's Party in the Right Spirit event, which combines party safety education with fun prom activities.

This is the first time Stewart has ever publicly told his story and he's doing it with illustrative flare.

Along his table are photographs of him and his friend Paul in 70s fashion, living it up like 16-year-olds do.

In March, 1975, they headed to Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, to party and meet girls. That day they did meet some girls bringing the total car occupancy to eight. On an S-bend, a car driven by a drunk teenager tried to pass them, sending their vehicle into a hydro support pole while the other car rolled into the ditch.

Since that day, Stewart has been living with major disabilities. He spent a year in a wheelchair, had his knee replaced, cortisone injections and now walks with a cane. He has chronic pain, requiring heavy medication and has experienced depression.

Over the years, Stewart has used his experience to discourage drunk driving – he is a bartender at McKecks, which gives him the chance to interact with people in those crucial decision making moments every day – but it was for this year's Grade 12 students he decided to make a more public statement.

"I was 16 and we liked to party. Unfortunately, I was on the other end of it. My best friend is dead," he says.

Party in the Right Spirit was coordinated by the Haliburton Highlands Community Action Group on Alcohol and Drugs and the local health unit and was achieved with broad community support.

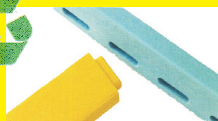

Other attractions during the day included Paul Christie's Be Real presentation, the OPP with a breathalyzer test, Season's salon doing sample hair styles and The Bridge youth centre with video games. There were also many educational booths.

Why Watercolours matters

PEOPLE HAVE BEEN TALKING for a while about what is going on with the Watercolours condo development planned to go in at the old Fleming College site overlooking Head Lake on Highway 118.

The fence surrounding the site has been taken down and the sales office on Highland Street has not reopened.

The relaunch of the project, which was expected this spring also hasn't happened.

editorial

The CEO of Mady Development Corporation, which is heading up the project, said things are taking time for a combination of two reasons: the economy is still bad and the site planning process with Dysart et al is taking longer than expected.

They are also looking into how to change the project to better suit the tastes of the Haliburton customer.

This all takes time.

People here care about the progress – even the small stops and starts – because for many any new housing is a chance to stay in town.

As the manager of Parklane and Echo Hills apartments, Barb Fawcett, told the paper this week, the under-served demographics are middle-class seniors and low-income families when it comes to housing.

And just as potential buyers were watching Silver Beach Developments on Lake Kashagawigamog with an eagle eye through the planning process, so too are buyers watching Watercolours.

And most are rooting for them.

The very few apartments in town at market rent are prized. Fawcett says those wanting into her market-rent suites can expect a seven- to 10-year wait.

Some of those looking for lakeside living have already begun moving into Silver Beach with more lined up to move in over the summer, but there are those who want to be walking distance to the grocery store and shopping and close to the hospital as they age.

And for the rest of the town, 150 more units of housing is a signal that there is a solid future for those who want to stay in town.

People are talking about the future of Watercolours because they care about the future of the town.

Going the distance

CITY PEOPLE are wimps. Let me clarify that. City people are wimps when it comes to certain things like building outdoor fires, taking down a moose at full speed and, well, and anything related to distance.

We rural folk think nothing of driving two hours to buy shoes or discount ham but a city person will moan when the nearest bank is more than a block away.

I realize this has everything to do with convenience (they have it, we lack it) but is it really that much to ask to drive 20 minutes for cigarettes or sour cream or cigarette-flavoured sour cream (it's new and not very successful)?

Perhaps we're the idiots. What person in his right mind would drive an hour just to satisfy a Big Mac attack (the cruel irony: wasting gas acquiring something that will ultimately give you gas)? Hell, for most of us, a simple trip to the grocery store becomes a road trip ("Hey kids, grab your sleeping bags, we're going for milk!") so we think nothing of packing a lunch on our journey to buy lunch.

Canada is essentially a very rural – more accurately "barren" – country, so for most of us long trips are the norm.

Very few Canadians can access 14 pharmacies in the space of two miles and that's where city people are deeply misguided. They arrive on our doorstep flabbergasted at the thought of having to go more than five minutes in any direction to find what they want. You can see the despair appear in their eyes when they discover The Gap is at least a day away and that we're out of the delivery range for most products except for fishing tackle and snowplow accessories.

For us, the reverse notion is almost unfathomable. Driving city streets is like being a chomaholic at Willy Wonka's. If you miss the first Tim Hortons there will be nine more before you hit the next traffic light. In fact the next traffic light probably has a Tim Hortons drive thru (no sense in wasting time while the light's red). We simply can't imagine that kind of convenience, at least based on what we're used to (doughnuts at one end of the county; icing at the other) and we arrive back in town with the kind of far-fetched stories ("ATM machines, as far as the eye can see") Magellan must have had after his little journey.

So, to the city folk out there looking for their early morning rural coffee fix: it's here. It just might involve taking a portage to find it.

There is no free lunch

I WALKED INTO THE HOUSE much like any normal superhero might – with modesty and very little of my cape or leotards showing. I'm not going to say it was a big day – a turning point in my career or anything – but let's be honest, it's not every day a man finishes in second place in a chicken wing eating contest.

"Notice anything different?" I asked my wife as I stood, elbows extended with one fist on each hip.

"You've got what appears to be honey garlic sauce on your forehead," she answered demurely. She was clearly trying to hide her fierce admiration and pride.

"Did you hear it on the radio?" I said.

"No, I can see it right now. It's a big blob."

"I was referring to my victory," I clarified.

"Yes," she said. "I heard. You came in second place in a three-man chicken wing eating contest."

You wouldn't have known it. There was no ticker tape or rose petals thrown haphazardly at my feet, as I'm certain was happening at Rick Lowes's residence. Rick, the Moose FM morning man, beat me by consuming 15 more grams of chicken wings – just a little more than half an

galea

ounce.

Does that make him more of a man? Well, let's move on to the next question – the one that's on everyone's mind. That's right. Was Lowes taking performance-enhancing drugs?

I know it's an ugly accusation, but I think it's a fair question. I mean, this is the second time he's won that M&M's chicken-wing eating contest. Coincidence? Yeah, right.

And it's not like I didn't prepare. I was in superb physical condition for the event. Two days prior I almost managed a single sit up. And, on that morning – before stepping into the ring – I only had two, rather than my usual three servings of breakfast.

Don't get me wrong. Lowes is a fine competitor – chickens fear him. But I was doing everything humanly possible and I still fell 15 grams short of victory. Heck, at one point in the contest I thought I swallowed a couple of bones – and this was confirmed this morning, by the way. I can only guess at the agony he felt.

The thing is, if wing eating ever becomes an Olympic sport, Lowes will probably have to ease up on the steroids to make the team. All you have to do is look over at his abnormally developed esophagus to see that something's up. It's true; he's got the digestive tract of a racehorse.

Then again, it could be just good genetics. Maybe he comes from a long line of incredibly good wing eaters. Maybe, for as long as his line has been in existence, they've been bred to ensure chickens will not fly. Who knows?

All I know is that Rick Lowes is a God among chicken wing contestants and I bow to him. In fact, Rick, if you are reading this, I would humbly ask you to become my Sensei and teach me the art of wingfood.

I promise that I'd only use this power for good. I would not walk into bars and start challenging rank amateurs just to satisfy my own perverse sense of pleasure. Unless you said that was OK – and then it would be game on.

Whether Rick takes me on as an apprentice or not is yet to be determined. But if he does, I imagine it to be something very similar to the Karate Kid type of scenario. "Wings on! Wings off" – that kind of thing. If nothing else it will raise the level of competition for next year and make this even more of a spectator sport.

Either way, I doff my honey and garlic covered hat to him. Hey, if I ever need a wing man, I'm giving Rick Lowes a call.

letters to the editor

Oops, a typo

To the Editor,

The Globe and Mail has spilled the beans (The Globe and Mail, May 6, 2010, Your Business, page E6)!

Local actor Mike Jaycock, having so ably played the illustrious U.S. president Franklin D. Roosevelt in last summer's production of Annie, seems to be progressing to take on the role of Dick Cheney in a new play (comedy, tragedy?) featuring the man who has been at the helm of both Halliburton as CEO from 1995 to 2000 and the U.S. as vice-president from 2000 to 2008.

Or am I mis-reading the misprint? Fortunately, I believe that all publicity, be it due to spelling errors or whatever, is good publicity.

FIREBIRD

Rotary winner still lucky 23 years later

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

Nineteen eighty-seven was a lucky year for Muriel Peters.

The Haliburton native was at the annual Rotary summer carnival that year when she decided to purchase a ticket for the car draw.

"I bought one ticket from Paul Wilson and paid $10 for it," explains Peters. "Back then the carnival took place where the arena is."

A few days later, Peters got a phone call telling her she had won a brand new white Pontiac Firebird.

"I didn't believe them when they told me," she laughs. "You just buy a ticket because it goes to the Rotary Club and helps them. You don't think about winning the car."

The following day, Peters headed over to Curry Motors, located at that time at the corner of Highland and Maple streets (currently the home of Rexall), and drove the Firebird right off the lot.

"I really wanted that car," says Peters. "I felt young and hip when I won it. I'm still driving it to this day."

Twenty-three years later, Peters says she has had no problems with her car and plans on keeping it forever.

Peters proved that good things definitely do come in threes, as her lucky streak didn't end with just a car. In that same year, Peters won a camper and an overnight stay at the Pinestone, both awarded in separate contests.

"I kept the camper for a number of years and would take it up to the wildlife reserve and park it there for the weekend," says Peters. "I eventually sold it when it became too much."

According to Peters, her streak of luck both started and ended in 1987.

"People will often say to me, 'hey Muriel, why don't you buy my ticket,'" she laughs. "I haven't won anything since, but that's OK."

Tickets for this year's Rotary car draw are available at $20 each or seven for $100. The early bird draw will take place on June 6. The car draw will take place on Aug. 4 at this year's Rotary summer carnival.

Rick Lowes, radio personality on Moose FM, has once again claimed the title of best chicken-wing eater in Haliburton County.

For the second year running, Lowes beat out competitors from Canoe FM and the Haliburton Echo in the contest held May 8, put on by M&M Meat Shops

And while Lowes may have won this year, the next closest competitor – Echo columnist Steve Galea – was only 15 grams away from the title. Coming in third was Ryan Petch of Canoe FM.

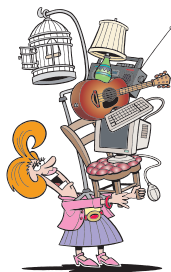

Supporters of the cause came into the M&M parking lot to watch the contest, but also to buy a barbecued lunch for charity.

The event raised $1,424 in Haliburton.

■ NO MORE REBATES

Local geothermal providers don't sweat rebate loss

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

While they certainly appreciated the large ecoEnergy rebate provided by the government to their customers, local geothermal energy providers maintain that the reduction in the subsidy won't hurt their sales.

The federal government recently announced it will no longer be offering a rebate to those planning to participate in ecoEnergy retrofits, including geothermal energy.

Up until March 31, the federal government had committed to providing a rebate intended towards those implementing geothermal energy through the ecoEnergy retrofit-homes program, which would be matched by the provincial government dollar to dollar.

"On that day [March 31] we received information that the federal government had pulled their ecoEnergy bill," says Benton Brown, geothermal technician with Haliburton Geothermal.

"Basically the total amount of grant money you could receive for a retrofit home was around $8,800. So what happened was in their bill the federal government said they would provide a grant of $4,400 and the provincial government said they would match it dollar for dollar.

"What we found out that day was the federal government pulled out of their end. Everyone was all up in arms wondering what that means for the provincial funding as well. Turns out the provincial government is still offering a rebate of $4,400, so there's still a government incentive there," says Benton.

Through the Ministry of Natural Resources website, the government announced it will no longer be accepting bookings for pre-retrofit evaluations, but the program will continue to be administered until March 31, 2011. Those who have already booked an appointment for a pre-retrofit evaluation, have completed an evaluation or have applied for re-entry to the program will remain eligible to apply for a grant.

Scott Neilson, co-owner of Walker's Heating and Cooling Systems, believes that despite the rebate termination, the savings from geothermal energy speak for themselves.

"The funding announcement would affect us in a way because of such a heavy government rebate," says Neilson. "However geothermal pays for itself."

"It's not a payback issue, it's an investment and you're investing in something that's saving you money the first day that you're running it," he says.

"Having this government rebate, yes it might affect it a bit, but the people that are putting geothermal in and the people that understand geothermal energy are still going to be putting it in."

Greg Brown, president of Haliburton Geothermal, has been in the business for about eight years.

He agrees that the system sells itself.

"I just really think it's the way of the future as far as “ Turns out the provincial government is still offering a rebate of $4,400, so there's still a government incentive there.

a reliable heating source without a huge expense," says Greg, "and it's very green. The fact that you're taking heat out of the earth that's already there to heat your home which needs to be heated, and at the same time you're not using fossil fuels or anything that needs carbon emissions to be produced."

According to Greg, a rebate of $4,400 covers approximately 17 per cent of the cost of retrofitting a home to geothermal energy.

"The important thing to note is in order to qualify for these grants you have to use a Canadian-certified geothermal technician," says Benton.

Neilson admits to being disappointed with the federal government's decision affecting the rebate.

"It's not a selling feature but it was a bonus towards the system to get people a little more interested," says Neilson.

However with everyone including the government moving towards green initiatives, Neilson says he wouldn't be surprised to see the rebate for ecoEnergy retrofits return.

"With the way things are going, in terms of being green, I could definitely see it coming back."

■ WATERCOLOURS

Developer still tweaking condominium concept

OMB ruling ... there are still a number of issues that they've deferred to the town to handle and that hasn't gone as quickly as might have been expected. We're just working through those issues," he said.

According to town planner Pat Martin, those issues relate to information about the site plan that must be provided by Mady Corp. including roadways, stormwater management and buffer zones among other things.

"The site plan process is not a quick process to start with and it's where we get down to the nitty-gritty and to the detail and that's where we are right now," Martin said.

The town requested information on a host of topics in February and is just waiting for Watercolours to return with the material, she said.

A few things are up in the air and we're trying to find a combination that works, we're trying to find a combination that people from your community will find acceptable. Chuck Mady

While they wait for the economy to recover and complete necessary paperwork, the corporation is also looking at the overall concept of Watercolours attempting to refine it for the Haliburton market, Mady said.

"First I have to get all the land use issues, the planning issues, solved and that's taken us way longer than we thought and we'll get that done. And ... as we're doing that we're trying to see how can we tweak this project to get it to work," he said.

"A few things are up in the air and we're trying to find a combination that works, we're trying to find a combination that people from your community will find acceptable and I don't think we've found that yet," he said.

Not enough units have been sold to start construction and the sales office on Highland Street was closed in the fall. If the plan for Watercolours changes substantially, those who have already made deposits on their units will be paid back, Mady said.

The corporation will also have to go back to the municipality for further planning meetings if they decide to change the function of the building.

One idea being battled around is for some of the units to be geared to retirement living, but nothing has been formally proposed.

Mady would not give any estimates of when construction would begin on the units, saying that the company was getting all of the pieces in line to continue the project.

RAILS END GALLERY

Paternity Suite captures tender connections

GEORGE FARRELL

Special to the Echo

Ya gotta love that Laurie Brown, curator at the Rails End Gallery in Haliburton. She's always thinking of new ways to engage the public in what's happening at the gallery.

As the name of the new show will attest, she also has a sense of humour.

"For this show I decided to take a concept that I developed after seeing a work by Laurie O'Reilly called 'Home on Leave.'

"The painting captured something of the bittersweet loss I feel knowing my dad and I are both grownups now," Brown says.

The premise of Paternity Suite "is to show a suite of images around paternity, a sort of riffing on a theme," she explains.

One artist who fit Brown's concept is Laurie O'Reilly. The other, perhaps surprisingly, is movie maker Julian Van Mil.

In the case of O'Reilly it's not hard to connect Brown's thematic dots, because O'Reilly's work focuses, for the most part, on paternity.

Her large canvases are crudely powerful, and mainly show images of a father's love toward his children.

"Her images address the life forces that we all spring from, and how they [fathers] interact with their progeny, and the quality of the relationship," states Brown.

O'Reilly's brush strokes are large and heavy, and the imagery is both tender and somewhat disturbing.

There is a latent quality to the works that suggests, in some parallel universe, her paintings would not show paternal love, but some other, perhaps more dangerous emotion.

Those parallel universe feelings "have a lot to do with the faces," according to O'Reilly.

"My paintings take a long time to come up with the story, which is on many layers. It's the reality versus the romanticism of images. One of the reasons for my works being loosely painted is to allow the viewer to finish them," she says.

Julian Van Mil's contribution to the show is his six-minute movie titled Dance of Death.

The tenuous link to the relationship theme of Paternity Suite is that the work is a part of a collaboration with his father, who is local artist Al Van Mil, and brother Eric, who's responsible for the movie's beautiful music.

Dance of Death is visually stunning.

The story line has to do with Death visiting a young woman with babe in arms. Death dances with the coltish woman in front of a full moon, atop a watery dance floor, and amid swirls of dissipating imagery.

As might be expected of such a short piece, the story line and characters are not fully developed, and once the mewling baby has been placed in its sleeping basket, (in order for mom to dance with Death at the stroke of midnight), it's not shown again save for a fleeting shadow crossing its sleeping countenance.

So much for maternity.

The movie is accompanied by a man's narration, quoting poetry by W. H. Auden.

Lines like "Change your partner, dance when you can," and "not to be born is the best for man," help to add to the macabre elements of the movie.

The overall visual effect is a little like a three way marriage between Edgar Allen Poe (yes, a raven makes an appearance), Michael Jackson (Death's head mask is evocative of Thriller), and the National Ballet, (the portrayal of Death's dance partner is by an accomplished dancer with balletic experience).

"To me the film encapsulates the worst fears of each father regarding the familial relationship," says Brown.

That might be a stretch, and the inclusion of the movie in Paternity Suite feels a bit like it was shoe horned, to make it fit.

Nevertheless, the offerings of O'Reilly, and the Van Mil collaboration, work as standalone exhibits, and is another fine example of the creative offerings from curator Brown and the Rails End Gallery.

Paternity Suite spans both Mother's Day and Father's Day, and is at the Rails End Gallery from May 8 until June 20.

■ DYSART BRIEFS

Steinkamp buys property on Industrial Park Road

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the May 3 meeting of Dysart et al council.

The municipality of Dysart et al approved the sale of land located on Industrial Park Road to restaurateur Maarten Steinkamp. The property was purchased for the price of $60,000.

According to the bylaw authorizing and confirming the sale of land, the municipality has the power to dispose of land no longer required for municipal purposes.

The bylaw states that no comments were received with respect to the sale of the land and that the council has declared the land surplus.

According to the municipality the lot that was purchased is currently vacant.

Cottagers instructed to remove illegal dock

A request submitted to continue the use of a municipal road allowance for the purpose of a private dock was turned down by council.

Dorothy Mitchell and Jeff Brooks sent a letter to the municipality regarding the use of a shoreline allowance on Benoir Lake. In the letter Mitchell and Brooks explain that the property they purchased, 1015 Michael Rd., had a dock installed by the previous owners, which has been in use for more than 30 years.

In the letter they write, "We would like to apply for permission to continue to use this shoreline road allowance. Our intention is to continue to maintain the dock and use it for our own personal use. We understand that the previous owners used this area for the past 30 years and that no other cottagers in the area have ever used this shoreline allowance. We do understand that it is public property."

The letter also stated that the current owners "understand that the permission granted to the previous owners [for the dock] is not transferable to us as the new owners."

Council informed Mitchell, who was in attendance at the meeting, that no dock allowance was ever permitted to the previous owner and that the dock in question is illegal. The shoreline access the dock currently sits on is the only public access point to Benoir Lake, furthering council's argument to remove the dock.

Mitchell inquired as to whether or not a dock could be installed on another piece of shoreline property that she had deeded access to. Council informed her this was not a possibility, as she possessed deeded access only, which only gave her the right of entry to the water.

Council requested she remove both the dock and the deck attached to it.

hours for the Dysart arena. The league is scheduled to begin on May 1 and run until July 24 and take place on Saturdays. The program will comprise a total of 60 hours.

Thyrring requested the use of the auditorium for additional recreational purposes. Since, according to council, the start up of a ball hockey league is an excellent recreational opportunity for the area, council wanted to assist with this initiative.

CAO/clerk Tammy McKelvey suggested a flat fee of $100 per day for the auditorium rental when it involves a minimum of four hours of ice rental, as is customarily done in the winter.

Council agreed to follow this protocol for the ball hockey league and passed a resolution for the rental fee.

LEGION

Youth awards night 'best ever'

WARREN RILEY

Special to the Echo

The atmosphere was one of excitement, anticipation and broad smiles. After weeks and months of difficult scrutinizing, the winners were announced and their presence requested at the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 129 Haliburton, to receive their due recognition and awards. The May 7 event saw more than 100 in attendance and according to Brian Hambly, youth education chairman, "This is [one of] the largest gatherings I have ever seen for these award ceremonies." He added, "In one category alone [Poster] we received more than 122 submissions and if anyone wants to help us next year decide the winners, you all have an immediate job." Legion president Carla Watson and Legion first vice-president Jack Greavette assisted chairman Hambly during the presentations.

The evening started off with a brief explanation of the Legion's inception due to the First World War and its impact on the Canadian soldiers and their families back in Canada. Then came the presentations with smiles, laughter and cameras flashing. Cheques were presented to each winner amounting from $10 for third-place winners to $35 for the first-place winners. Completing the successful presentations were refreshments for all.

It was heart warming to observe the talent and enthusiasm of today's youth especially being locally recognized by the Royal Canadian Legion, the winner's peers and adults alike. Due credit must also be given to branch 129, Haliburton, for adopting a principle of stimulating our youth to advance their special talents. Through these awards in recognizing the importance of honing our youth's skills, they will undoubtedly be better prepared for the world of tomorrow.

NURSES' WEEK

Your health is their business

Health unit recognizes its nurses for showing care, compassion and commitment to public health

While they are few in number, nurses who work in public health in this area are making a major difference in the lives of local residents.

Compared to their more numerous nursing colleagues in hospitals and long-term care homes, the nearly 60 nurses with the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit practise their skills in a setting without walls. Health unit nurses can be found in schools, homes, clinics and venues throughout the community promoting health to individuals and families, while also protecting the overall population against the spread of disease in Haliburton County, Northumberland County and the City of Kawartha Lakes.

"Public health is all about promoting and protecting the health of the public, and nurses play an essential role in this," says Dr. Lynn Noseworthy, medical officer of health with the HKPR District Health Unit. "Every day, our nurses show care, compassion and commitment to the public's health – your health – in so many ways."

During National Nursing Week, which runs May 10 to 16, the health unit is recognizing the role its nurses play in protecting public health. The theme of Nursing Week is Nursing: You Can't Live Without It, and for Dr. Noseworthy, it is well chosen.

"When you look at what our nursing staff do in the public health field, it touches all facets of daily life," she adds.

Last fall's response to the H1N1 influenza virus is a case in point. Health unit nurses spent long hours promoting good hand hygiene, tracking H1N1 outbreaks in the community, and providing H1N1 vaccine at dozens of clinics throughout the area so that people were protected against the new strain of influenza, Dr. Noseworthy notes.

On a day-to-day basis, health unit nurses will also:

- Investigate cases and contacts of reportable communicable disease, and work with other agencies to control outbreaks.
- Promote immunization and good infection control practices.
- Provide immunization programs in schools and ensure children in day-cares and schools have up-to-date vaccinations.
- Promote the benefits of healthy living, including the need for good nutrition, being physically active, staying tobacco-free and getting regular screening for breast and cervical cancers.

- Offer prenatal classes and resources to expectant parents.
- Conduct follow-up visits with new mothers to help them adjust to life with a newborn.
- Support the healthy development of young children by providing support and advice to families.
- Run sexual health clinics to provide confidential counselling, treatment and testing for sexually transmitted infections.

To find out more about the work of nurses, call the health unit at 1-866-888-4577 or visit www.hkpr.on.ca.

Help us light up the night. Luminaries are candles that are placed in special bags that bear the name of cancer survivors or those who have lost their battle to cancer. After being lit during a twilight ceremony, luminaries provide light and inspiration to participants all night long.

Luminaries can be purchased at the event and before the event.

"Fifty Years of Stewardship and Beyond, A Brief History of Harcourt Park"

Community Partners gather to recognize Volunteers Week, revisit their continuous financial support to HHHS, and celebrate the launch of a historical publication.

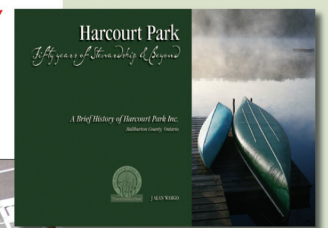

On April 20, 2010, a group from the Haliburton County community gathered at Haliburton Highlands Health Services to recognize Volunteers Week and to celebrate the publication, Fifty Years of Stewardship and Beyond, A Brief History of Harcourt Park Inc.

In attendance were (pictured left to right) Alan Wargo-Author, Dale Walker-HHHSF, Executive Director, Klara Oyler-Ontario Trillium Foundation, Grant Review Team, Don Popple-HHHSF, Campaign Co-Chair, Patti Tallman-HCDC, Community Economic Development Manager, Ray Selbie-Law Office, Thomas Ballintine-Haliburton Highlands Museum, Director, Rob McConnell-Director, Harcourt Park Inc., Chairman 50th Anniversary Committee.

The celebration of the publication of the Park's history at the Haliburton Highlands Health Services was marked by the presentation of an honorarium from Harcourt Park in the name of Rob McConnell. Rob was instrumental in securing substantial grants from the Ontario Trillium Foundation and the Haliburton County Development Corporation that made the publication of the history financially viable. He also was responsible for selection and captioning of all photographs, illustrations, maps, tables and other features of the history, as well as for managing the whole process of production of what is quite a beautiful book. The book was designed by Linda Middleton (Crystal Image Studio) of Harcourt and edited by Marjorie Ludlow-Green of Minden.

Harcourt Park, built on the efforts of its volunteer members, has a long history of extending its volunteer efforts into the larger Haliburton Community. Two of its members, Lloyd Leadbeater and Steve Pogue, have served on the Dysart et al Council as representatives from Ward 3. Steve Pogue continues in this role. The Park also has been a consistent donor to what usually is called the Haliburton Hospital, since 1979, when it was an "outpost" hospital operated by the Red Cross. Earliest donations were spearheaded by Don Fevreau, Park member and a realtor in the Harcourt/Wilberforce area for many years. Don also was responsible for personal donations over the years. When asked about this tradition of giving, Rob McConnell stresses that "cottagers, most of whom reside in the GTA, recognize the importance of supporting the Haliburton Highlands Health Services because someday they may need to avail themselves of its services." Rob also urges the Haliburton Highlands cottage associations to consider supporting the hospitals when planning fund raising activities for their associations.

"After All – Strong Support for HHHS Ensures Continued Quality Health Care Services"

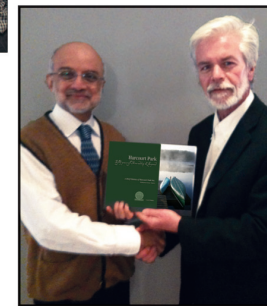

Harcourt Park is a large cottage community located just north of the Village of Harcourt, consisting of some 7,000 acres, eighteen lakes and with a membership of some 525 families. Founded in 1959 as a recreational property development by an enterprising builder from Toronto, William, "Bill" Phillips, Harcourt Park is owned and governed by its members. The owner/members collectively and the leaders of the Park who sit on its Board of Directors, have created a vibrant, financially sound and extremely well-run cottage community that is rich in traditions of volunteerism and community events that make cottage life in Harcourt Park a unique experience.

CURLING

Jake Walker speaks at fundraiser

CHAD INGRAM

Staff reporter

Jake Walker, the Minden resident and curling phenom who skipped Team Canada to a bronze medal at this year's World Junior Curling Championships, shared his story with members of the Haliburton Curling Club at a club fundraiser on May 8.

Walker, 20, is a veteran of both the Haliburton and Minden curling clubs and told fundraiser attendees that the experience and guidance he'd gained locally had sent him sliding on his way to the highest levels of the sport.

"It got me to where I am today," he said.

However, at the beginning of the season, Walker said his expectations for his team were not very high.

"I didn't even expect to make it to provincials," he said, explaining that he and his teammates weren't playing the positions that best suited their strengths. "The positions weren't true."

However, after a line-up change that moved Walker from vice to the role of skip, the team went on to an astounding string of victories, with just a couple of losses the remainder of the season.

The team, based out of Kitchener, first swept their way to victory at the provincial championships in Teeswater and then took gold at the national junior championships in Sorel-Tracy, Que.

"Becoming Team Canada is a pretty big thing," Walker said, admitting that he had to try his best to hold back tears as he stood on the podium accepting his gold medal.

The distinction earned his team a trip to watch curling at the Vancouver Olympics, which Walker described as a "lifetime experience."

There, Walker and his teammates were invited back to the Edmonton home of Canadian men's skip Kevin Martin, considered one of the best curlers on the planet.

"He's got a really nice house . . . I'll give you that," Walker said. "It was really cool to sit down with Kevin Martin and have a beer."

At the world champions in Flims, Switzerland, the team experienced a loss to the Chinese team.

"Those guys are nuts," Walker recalled, explaining that the Chinese were incredibly good at run-backs, shots where curlers use their stone to hit a series of other stones.

The Chinese team made a quad take-out for the victory.

Team Canada would meet the Chinese again in the bronze medal match though, and were victorious the second time around.

CHAD INGRAM/Echo

Minden resident Jake Walker, who skipped Team Canada to a third-place finish at the World Junior Curling Championships this year, shared his story with members of the Haliburton Curling Club during a club fundraiser on May 8.

They finished behind Switzerland and Scotland, both of whom Walker said his team should have beat.

Still, he said, "I'm not complaining."

Walker is an electrical engineering student at the University of Waterloo, where he had to drop out last year to curl.

He said this year, academics will be his top priority.

"I'm going to buckle down for school," Walker said, adding he wasn't sure in what capacity he might curl.

One of Walker's Team Canada jerseys was auctioned off during the fundraiser. It went to Curry Motors owner and Haliburton Curling Club member Don Popple, who said he planned to frame the jersey and hang it in the clubhouse.

OUTDOOR SPORTS

HHSS class gets some shooting practice

JERRY GROZELLE

Special to the Echo

To say they had a blast would be an understatement. Derek Little’s outdoor education program class from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School experienced something that very few high school students ever get a chance to do. The 18 students spent most of Thursday, May 6 at the Haliburton County Marksmen Club (HCMC) shooting a variety of firearms. The following day, they received some expert coaching in archery skills in the high school gym. The trip to the HCMC range, just north of Kinmount, has been an annual event for Little’s class for the past five years. The students are taught firearms safety and given some strict rules they must follow before taking their turns on the firing line under the guidance of designated range officers from the club. Each student tested his or her skill with rifles, shotguns and handguns. Everyone was required to wear hearing and eye protection. “Like all other years, it was a really successful day,” Derek Little said. “I think the kids really enjoyed it and from an education perspective it was a really important day for the kids to have gone through the course and done all the in-course stuff, the handling stuff; to learn the material and then get a chance to get out and practice what was preached. The feedback I got was good. They were quite ecstatic about everything.” “Nine of the 18 students had never fired a gun,” he added. “So they were really enthused.” Little noted that most of what the students and the general public hear about handguns is not positive. “A lot of what they know about a handgun isn’t necessarily what we want them to think about them,” Little said with a chuckle. He said the shotgun shooting was a bit intimidating for some, with the recoil causing a few bruised shoulders.

Little said a few students compared shooting a .22 rimfire to shooting a pellet gun. He pointed out to them that the range is much farther than a pellet gun. “It’s deadly up to three kilometres,” he told them. “It’s not a toy. You don’t just shoot it unless you know what you’re shooting at.” Walter Griffin is the manager of the HCMC range and an organizer of the annual youth day at the club. “We had a good group of kids and a wonderful turnout of members and friends to supervise and instruct the students,” he said. Little said the students were thrilled to participate and the healthy respect for firearms they garnered was really important. “The other thing that’s important is the fact that they got to shoot the guns and experience hands-on training for something they’d studied and now they’re allowed to make that educated decision [whether or not they want to hunt],” he said. “One student has already asked [her parents] for a pink 20 gauge shotgun for her birthday and she wants to be able to hunt this fall. “At least they can make that decision now. Nobody is making it for them,” he said. “Maybe some of them will want to join the marksmen club and just shoot, and that’s OK too.” Little said he’d rather see students going to a range and safely shooting than spending all their time playing video games. “There are so many life skills tied to just target shooting,” he said, “responsibility, respect... all of those things.” He said today’s kids would be far healthier mentally and physically if, for example, they went to a range such as the HCMC or to the archery range at the HHOA hatchery after school and shot for an hour instead of hanging out downtown. “I think there’s a lot of life skills that most people would like to see anyone be instilled with and we can do it with proper instructors and these ranges

ARCHERY SKILLS

Students thrilled to participate in annual event and giving these kids alternative ways to bide their time," he said.

Little says a healthy respect for firearms is a good thing. He said firearms are a part of our Canadian heritage. "Without trapping and hunting, maybe Canada wouldn't be what it is today," he said. "I don't think there's anything wrong with giving the kids this opportunity. It's good for them to get out and try something and make an educated decision."

A trip to the HCMC range is something that Little and his students eagerly anticipate. "It's something we look forward to doing and continuing to do every year that we run this program," he said.

The experience at the HCMC range Thursday was followed Friday with archery instruction by the Schneller family – Bruce, Rita and Rachael from North York. The students were taught the basics of safety and proper form before taking their turns with both compound and recurve bows. Bruce Schneller brought more than 40 years of archery experience to the high school. He has trained at the United States Olympic Centres in Colorado and California, as well as the New England School of Archery. He trains instructors and Little was one of several people who signed up for an instructor's course at the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association's facility on Haliburton County Road 1 Saturday.

Like the day before, the students gained some valuable training, which will allow them to make an educated decision regarding archery and whether or not they want to pursue archery as a sport or as a method of hunting.

TOWN HALL

The Highlands has opportunity to determine its own tourism destiny

There has been lots of recent conversation, questions and general upbeat buzz about the tourism town hall meeting scheduled for Wednesday, May 12 from 9:30 a.m. to noon at the Haliburton Legion.

The first question asked by everyone is: "As a retailer, an artist, realtor or restaurant owner why should I attend the tourism town hall?" The quick answer is that if you, your business, your village, township or county relies on the visitor or tourist dollar to survive, live and pay bills through the long winter months you should be attending this tourism town hall meeting. If you are among those who feel there appear to be fewer visitors to the Haliburton Highlands villages or that your phone is ringing less then you also should attend.

It is no secret that tourism and tourist dollars are needed to help the Haliburton Highlands prosper. Everyone from the people, businesses and politicians of this community needs to be involved in the conversation about how we can attract more tourism dollars. A purpose of this meeting is to put the movers and the shakers of this community together in one room to figure out what is needed to strengthen our Haliburton Highlands brand.

Who is running the meeting? The tourism town hall has evolved from the momentum of the executive of Haliburton Tourism (a group of area resort, B&B and lodge owners). Haliburton Tourism is hosting the meeting, the Haliburton County Development Corporation is providing financial support and facilitation.

The County of Haliburton economic development and tourism department, the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce and the Arts Council ~ Haliburton Highlands are all supporting the meeting. Now we are asking you for your support.

In recent months the Ontario Ministry of Tourism's regional designation of the Haliburton Highlands connected us to the region 11, an eastern part of the province from the Ottawa River to Haliburton County. This is an opportunity for us to put our heads together as a community so that the Haliburton Highlands can become more than the western edge of Region 11.

Our goal should be ensure that the Haliburton Highlands has a strong brand and identity. We need to continue to remind folks that we are only a 2.5 hour drive north of Toronto and just South of Algonquin Park.

At the town hall we will have a chance to hear about the province's new regional approach, the plans for the county for the upcoming year, take stock of our current economic climate, take a look at our Haliburton Highlands brand and look at ways that we as individuals, businesses, villages, townships and out County can strengthen our brand and attract more tourists.

Is your business or organization affected by the number of tourists we attract to the Haliburton Highlands? Have you put this tourism town hall meeting on your busy work week schedule?

If you have any questions about whether you should attend or want to know more about how you can contribute to this meeting please do not hesitate to call or email Sally Moore, co-president of Haliburton Tourism 705-286-4922 or info@sunnyrock.on.ca.

Saturday's magic number was 50

community news

wilberforce

Hilda Clark
448-2018

For sure it was party time in Wilberforce on Saturday, May 8. And 50 was the magic number for some special people. Even a few snowflakes with the showers outdoors couldn't dampen the celebrations.

At the Lloyd Watson Centre Ruby (Madill) and Harold Alden celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Family and friends were there with them at a lovely open house, sharing memories and bringing best wishes. Family includes Jim (Ann), Michael (Gail), Robert (Brenda) seven grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

A fine display of photos revealed many special times that Harold and Ruby have experienced together since May 7, 1960 when they were married. The ceremony was performed by Rev. McIntyre in Norland at the home of Harold's sister and brother-in-law, Elva and Joe Pearce. Elva was the matron of honour. Joe was Harold's best man. Little Patsy Madill, niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

Along with flowers, gifts and cards were special certificates of best wishes from Governor General Michaëlle Jean, Prime Minister Stephen Harper, Ontario's Lieutenant Governor David Onley, Premier Dalton McGuinty, the County of Haliburton and the Municipality of Highlands East. Anniversary cake and other delicious refreshments were enjoyed.

May we add our very best wishes for good health and happiness to this couple who have lived, raised their family, worked and played in Wilberforce for most if not all of their 50 years together.

Meanwhile at the Wilberforce Legion another special couple, Jim and Mina (Winterburn) Saunders were also celebrating 50 years of marriage. They too were wed on May 7, 1960 in Norland, hometown of the bride. There at the Baptist church Rev. McIntyre performed the ceremony. Gary Agnew was Jim's best man, Gary Eason was the usher. Mina was attended by maid of honour Shirley Greer and bridesmaid Lorna Hall. A reception was held at Jack's Pavilion, then a well-known hall on the north shore of Dark Lake in Wilberforce.

Their 50th anniversary brought together many friends of Jim and Mina and of course family members that included son Randy (Leisa), son Roger (Lorraine) and daughter Shelley (Doug) Powell. Here too refreshments included anniversary cake and other goodies served by the ladies auxiliary. A lovely party with plenty of good wishes were received by this couple who retired back to Jim's hometown after his many years of employment at General Motors in Oshawa. Many they enjoy many more happy years together.

Hang on! Another 50! Phillip Agnew celebrated his 50th birthday on Saturday, May 8. This friendly, well known Wilberforce man was feted by his family with a fine dinner at the recreation room at Maple View where he along with his cat Harry has made his home for about a year. Later in the evening friends dropped by with more best wishes and lots of hugs. Cameras clicked continuously to record this special occasion.

Once those very special candles were out everyone enjoyed a piece of Phillip's cake.

Phillip is the son of the late Eileen (Taylor) and Murray Agnew and brother of the late Fred. Sisters Winn, Cathy and Mary and so many family members who love Phillip dearly were there to make this a very special day for him. If the word had gotten out earlier about this party they would have had to hold it in the arena. And wouldn't that have pleased Phil, one of the biggest hockey fans in the area. From everyone in Wilberforce and area, happy birthday Phil.

Pat Simiana called to let us know that the annual roast beef dinner is being served on Saturday, May 22, at the Lloyd Watson Centre from 5 to 7 p.m. This fundraiser by and for the Wilberforce and area volunteer police association is always a great meal with adults dining for only $11, children 12 and under eat for $5.

Games night at the Outpost Museum is this Wednesday beginning at 7 p.m. Enjoy Scrabble, Uno, dominoes, Clue, checkers, crokinole and any other board game folks bring along.

Thinking about prepaying your funeral wishes?

The longer you wait, the more tax you will pay.

Recent changes in Ontario's tax structure will add an eight percent tax to funeral arrangements effective July 1st, 2010. The good news is you can avoid this increase if arrangements are prepaid before the effective date.

Prearrangement can offer peace of mind to you, and can spare your family from all of the hard decisions that need to be made at an often difficult and emotional time.

Call us for more information. We are here to help make it easier.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

QUESTION: How does one make money in real estate?

ANSWER: Buy low and sell high. One way to do this is to increase the property's market value. A real estate wealth creator is one who improves property so that the marketplace will pay more for the increased value of those improvements than it costs to make them. "Improvements" mean not only new construction but also renovation of existing structures or creating new uses for underutilized buildings or underused land. The person who spends $10,000 enlarging his home may be adding $20,000 to its value if there is a local demand for larger homes.

YOU MAKE MONEY in real estate by increasing its value by making wise improvements.
